Screen Magazine No. 94.

One Real
WHAT'S this! Women forsake powder puffs, French heels and mirrors for khaki uniforms, shiny leather puttees and salutes? Yes, and then in for training for the "Women's Motor Corps." See them follow instructions and then on active duty. With such pretty drivers our convalescent soldiers may not want to get well.

Which came first, the duck or the egg? This issue of the Screen Magazine will solve the question and give you numerous reasons to prove the answer. Even ducks are now patriotic. They eat corn to save wheat.

New York will soon be over grieving the loss of John Barleycorn. Our signs will read "Near-Beer" and as for the many barrels on hand, well—a keg of beer would provide many a "pickle," so there is no reason why they cannot be used as pickle barrels.

This film ends up with a letter written by one of these soldiers, which goes something like this:

"Dear Buddy: Me and Steve got leave for a day. When we hit the big town, Lordy, what sights! When I tried to parade my gondolas across the street I was sorry that Uncle Sam wouldn't give me more than $10,000 insurance. Folks down here, runnin' like chickens with their heads off, lookin' for nothin'. Am preparin' for our grand tour of Europe, so address my mail to Berlin.

(Signed)

"BUCK."
